The Association said that the last two years of closure of schools and pandemic situation has severely affected school children and apart from education they need emotional healing. So we have to keep in mind the psychological status of these children. They have to be gently made part of the school system again without overwhelming them," said Var. "So we have asked schools to celebrate the first week as a sort of home coming week which would include full-GF fun filled activities and counselling of students." The Association said that opening of schools is a moment when after many seasons of separation, our children should be back with us, when our empty school compounds still come alive again. The Association stressed that while we celebrate this while we give children back to school, we also need to ensure that we give children also reasons to celebrate this return. "The school coming should be such that children will remember it for their entire life and cherish this moment. For the time being let us keep the books aside and ask children what they want, engage them in activities like painting, poetry and story writing, sports activities, science activities and so on. Every child must have a story to tell. Ask them to speak and share their stories. It will help them a lot and relieve them of any burden they may be carrying," said Var. The Association has asked schools to decorate their classrooms and create a festive atmosphere. There should be no examination or tests during the first week, no mandatory uniform and a stress free atmosphere," said Var. "We have a whole year for education and let us celebrate the first week of reopening of schools as a big festival." The Association said that there must be children who lost their parents or a sibling to the pandemic and they must be given special attention. "Share their agony. Share your goodwill. These are some children who lost their books in long lockdown and will touch them again now. Let them not worry. Reassure them." The Association advised the schools, "Share your dreams with the children. Your vision of the school, share with the world. Let the children speak. Listen to their aspirations. Tell them times have changed. Make them feel that you have given as a teacher, while the children have also grown a lot. It is a new opportunity for most of them, respect their ego.
